Dr. Dorothy Fosdick and Dr. Robert Tufts of the Senate Committee on Government Operations, came to see me this morning. They are making a study for Senator Jackson's Committee. As they are both talented, and have had long experience in government, as well as in academic life, this type of analysis could be important. I spoke to them especially about the possibility of improving the quality of entrants into the Foreign Service by the ~~use of a probationary period.~~

Cornelius Ryan came to see me this afternoon, in connection with his wish to send Foy Kohler in Moscow a communication of a secret nature. I discussed this with him, and got the letter off.

General Van Ryzin came in to talk about [redacted] arrangements for the Marine Corps Ball on Thursday.

Harry Morgan stopped to see me. I was glad to learn from him that the Morgan Library has now completed its fund raising, and they do not anticipate any difficulty in expanding their facilities.

Mike Bessie called on me. We had a chat about books, and especially [redacted] this renewed attempt to get Jean Monnet started on a [redacted] biography or autobiography.

Dorothy Fosdick and Robert Tufts came back, to renew their morning's conversation.

Tonight, I went to the Mansion House for a dinner in support of the World Wildlife Fund. E fell suddenly ill, and could not go. This was a white tie and decorations affair: the four speakers being the Lord Mayor, Peter Scott, Prince
